Canberra is a city of plenty, and you can sure spend plenty of time here. We spent eight days touring the area, and got a taste of everything the nation's capital has to offer. From museums, markets, gardens, science centres, and tons of wonderful history lessons, this was a chance to learn, discover, and be pleasantly surprised by a city in the bush. Highlights include: Parliament House, Questacon, the Royal Australian Mint, the War Memorial, Cockington Green Gardens and Floriade!

A trip to Canberra should be on every RV tourist's list. The capital is an easy spot to get to only three hours west of Sydney, and just off the major highway routes as you're heading north or south. In all of its busyness of being a big city and the country's political headquarters, there is a certain charm that echoes throughout this place. This city has a lot to offer, and is a truly wonderful location to spend some time. This is, after all, the heartbeat of the nation.
